Spring News

You should soon be receiving the first Journal for the Society. This is a project that has been in the pipeline for some time now, with a few hitches along the way! As a first edition there will obviously be room for alteration and improvement—so your comments would be greatly appreciated—good as well as bad!

We are extremely grateful to all our advertisers who have made the production of this publication possible—please do support them. We do have additional copies of the journal available for distribution to potential new members or to place in your farm shop, holiday cottage etc. Please let me know if you would like additional copies.

It was extremely gratifying to see so many Longhorn breeders at Roger Carter’s dispersal sale, held at Worcester Market at the beginning of March. It was pleasing to see good prices being achieved, and also plenty of sales to new breeders. We send Roger and Jan our good wishes.

For those who missed out at Roger’s sale, there will be plenty of opportunity to purchase quality stock over this coming year: the Midlands Group Sale is being held at Worcester Market on the 23rd April; on the 21st May at Chelford Market is a combined dispersal sale from George Worth’s Heyworth herd and production sale from the Bollin Valley Partnership’s Bollin herd; the 25th June sees the dispersal of the Waltham herd—at Worcester Market, whilst on 13th August is a sale at Taunton Market; and we have our National Show and Sale at Melton Mowbray in September.

With the summer showing season nearly upon us, now is the time to be thinking about preparation of cattle for classes. If you have never shown before, why not give it a go? There are plenty of classes at smaller shows, and you will find other breeders a very friendly and helpful bunch.

Finally, this is traditionally the busiest time of year for calvings. When you come to put your cows back in calf, don’t forget the bulls available through the Society’s AI scheme.

Spring Calving
Presumably most people will be calving their cows in the spring, and if everything has gone according to plan, this has a lot of advantages. With the spring grass the cow will be able to give her maximum in milk and most calving can be done outside with little or no worry about weather conditions.

We do not deliberately calve anything before late March, thus avoiding the worst of the winter. However, if the weather is very wet and cold, it is most essential to bring inside any cows that are about to calve—even if it is only a temporary pen in a barn where they can be kept windfree and dry. Calving these early cows inside has its advantages because you will be able to keep an eye on the cow regularly without walking for miles around a paddock or field, perhaps, as often happens, in the early hours of the morning. If you have used A.I. for your cow or cows you will almost certainly know the exact date they will be due to calve. If, however, they have been running with a bull, this proves a little difficult because you may not have seen him serve the cow or cows, in which case you will have to go by personal judgement and close observation as to their calving dates. As the cow gets near her calving time she will start to “udder up” and from then on it would be advisable to keep a close watch on her two or three time a day. When she is finally ready she will find a quiet corner in the field, where she is best left undisturbed.

Easy Calvers
As a rule, Longhorns are exceptionally easy calvers, but should she appear to be in labour for perhaps three-quarters of an hour and nothing happening, i.e. feet and head not showing, it could mean that there are complications. It could mean that the calf is wrongly presented, in which case she will need assistance. As this is far too complex to put down on paper, it should only be carried out under experienced supervision. Cleanliness at this time cannot be emphasized too strongly—plenty of soap and water and well scrubbed hands.

When the calf finally arrives it will soon be on its feet and find its own way to suckle the mother. In no way attempt to strip milk into the calf’s mouth direct form its mother. This I must emphasise, otherwise you may find a dead calf on your hands, caused by drowning. If you find the calf has not suckled within 7-8 hours, and you are absolutely certain it has not done so, for this is a rare occurrence indeed, then the best course to follow would be to strip some of the mother’s milk into a bottle fitted with a lamb’s teat and feed it that way until such time as it can be encouraged to suckle its mother.

Supplementary Feed
Bearing in mind one expects to have strong and healthy calves, the condition of the cattle at this time of year is quite an important factor. If I find that one or two cows have not wintered too well, then they may need some supplementary feeding, and I would suggest approximately 6lb concentrates, i.e. rolled barley or low protein beef or barley nuts. This can be partly supplemented by sugar beet if available—about 4lb concentrates, and 3-4lb sugar beet pulp. As an alternative beef cobs are available; these are large feed nuts that can be fed on the ground when it is dry. I hope to deal more fully with winter rations in a later article.

Parasites
If the condition of these poorer cattle does not improve, then one must look for other causes, and it is as well to think of the possibility of worms. The symptoms of worms are that the coat becomes very dull and lank and the dung is usually very loose; in severe cases the animal will become lethargic. Of course, these symptoms can be caused by some other problem, and if the animal does not respond to worming, it is advisable to consult your veterinary surgeon. There are now several worm remedies available on the market—your veterinary surgeon will be able to advise as to the best one for you.

Minerals
Free access to minerals all the year round is advantageous, and the importance of this cannot be stressed too strongly, particularly at this time of year with the rich spring grass coming along. For my cattle I like to use good general purpose mineral blocks. These can be tied to a fence post, but in my experience this does not prove very satisfactory as the blocks gradually disintegrate. I put them in feeding pans so that when they do break up, it is not so wasteful. It is a swell not to site these blocks too near water sources because some animals adapt a taste for the salt and will take too much, which can be harmful.

Spring Grass
With the winter months now coming to an end, one can look forward to the grass starting to grow. Our grazing system, very briefly, is that we confine the main herd to one field through the winter months, keeping one further field closed off to enable it to be “top dressed” as early as possible ready for the spring. These can then be used alternately through the summer months. However, care is needed when turning cattle on to rich spring grass. Whether they have been yarded or out-wintered, it is best to give them plenty of hay a few hours previously. It will also help if they have access to plenty of hay or good feeding straw in a rack in the new pasture. This will act as a roughage and avoid some of the ill effects that can be caused by new grass.
The Importance of Colostrum

Once a calf leaves the sterile surroundings of its mother’s womb, it is immediately exposed to a variety of disease-producing bacteria. The most important of these is probably E. coli, a major cause of enteritis and septicaemia. Since calves at birth have no immunity against infection, their only protection is provided by the antibodies in their mother’s colostrums. These antibodies are protein substances often referred to nowadays as “immune globulins”, or simply Ig, and they can make all the difference between survival and death. Although the importance to the calf of the Ig in its mother’s colostrum has been recognized for decades, a large amount of research has been done on this subject in the past few years. A brief summary of present knowledge is as follows:

1. The mortality rate in calves with low blood Ig levels is much higher than in those with high Ig levels
2. The concentration of Ig in colostrums is at its peak at calving. It then drops rapidly, falling to under 10% of its peak level in two days. Colostrum Ig levels are much lower in cows that have been pre-milked.
3. At birth, calves have no Ig in their blood. After the first feed immune globulins in the colostrums are rapidly absorbed from the intestine into the blood stream. It is these antibodies which protect the calf against septicaemia.
4. The intestine is only able to absorb Ig for a very short time, and it is essential that the calf gets its first feed within a few hours of birth. The minimum requirement is an intake of about 60ml per kg bodyweight (1 fl. Oz per lb) within 8 hours of birth.
5. The rate of absorption of Ig from the intestine depends not only on the time after birth, but also on the calf being “mothered”. Absorption is much more efficient if the calf, whether bucket-fed or suckled, remains with its mother for 24 hours.
6. Calves are often assumed to have had enough colostrums early enough merely because they have been left with their mothers. This may be untrue for a variety of reasons, and the only way to be sure is either to keep mother and calf under observation or to bucket-feed the colostrums within a few hours of birth.
7. A sucking calf’s instinct leads it towards the highest point of its mother’s underside. If the cow has a low pendulous udder the calf may waste valuable hours vainly seeking the teats either in its mother’s groin or around her brisket. If this happens the first feed may come too late for maximum absorption of Ig to take place. Other factors, e.g. chilling in calves born outside in winter, may also delay the first feed.

Council Corner

Election of Chair

Frank Sutton was re-elected Chairman of the Society for a third year, and opened the meeting by thanking Council members for their support, and by welcoming Andrew Nelson and Joshua Brigg.

Council Terms

A proposal to restrict the time members serve on Council was debated. It was decided that Council members’ expertise and the contribution they could make to the breed and the society was more important than artificially restricting length of terms.

Election Lobbying

Council considered representations on this issue and agreed that it would be fair if each candidate’s proposer and seconder was invited to provide the reasons why they felt their nominee should be elected. These reasons would be printed with the election papers.

Shows

The Society will be in attendance at the major shows. In addition, sponsorship has provided for additional show boards which can be set up at some of the regional shows. The Society will have a stand at The Game Fair this year as it is being held at Belvoir Castle—the linkage to Robert Bakewell means this should offer good promotional opportunities.

Inspections at Sales

Council debated the issue of whether or not to inspect at sales, and if so, how that should be undertaken, at great length. However, with strongly held views both for and against, it was agreed to seek further information before reaching a conclusion.

Judges’ Workshop

A judges’ workshop will be held, at which all current members on the judges’ list together with prospective judges will be expected to attend. The master judge will be David Lowry and Mrs Pat Quinn has very kindly offered to host. The date is expected to be late summer/early autumn and those required to attend will be notified in due course.

Bulls

Concern had been expressed to Council that many bulls being registered were not of a sufficiently high standard. A proposal was made that bull registration fees should be increased. It was noted that the fee had not increased for many years, but Council was not convinced that increasing registration fees alone would necessarily lead to better quality bulls. They felt that bull selection workshops which would enable members to benefit from the better bulls they selected would be beneficial.

New Bull for Society’s AI Scheme

Raby Galdiator has been accepted into the Society’s AI scheme and will be available priced £20 per straw.
REGIONAL GROUP NEWS

Diary date for 2006

Autumn 2006—Longhorn Sale at Taunton Market
Dispersal of the Leebarn Herd

On 5th March 2005 Roger Carter’s noted Leebarn herd was dispersed at Worcester Market. It was with great reluctance, through health reasons, that the decision was made. The herd was started in the early 1970s with the purchase of yearlings from the late Robert Wales’ “Stoke” herd and these were later joined by a bull, Winthill King and two heifers from Lesley Hutton’s Winthill herd. These five animals were the foundation of the Leebarn herd which went on to have considerable success at many of the major shows. Firstly with Leebarn Napoleon and Leebarn Louise both winning at these shows, and later Leebarn Kojak who was Royal Show Champion in 1990, and more recently Leebarn Rembrandt, now owned and shown by Stan Dixon. Four cattle were retained for sentimental reasons and Roger hopes that this will enable him to stay in touch with the many friends and breeders he has met through the Society.

Handling Facilities and Health and Safety Risks

The Health & Safety Executive (HSE) has produced regulations regarding the handling and housing of cattle. The full information sheet—Agriculture Information Sheet No 35 is available from HSE (tel: 01787 881165).

However, for those thinking about artificial insemination of cattle, here are a few pointers to make sure that cow and technician are both safe:

♦ The cow and technician should stand on the same level. This also helps conception rates—survey work shows that when cow stand on floor that is six inches or more above a technician, conception rates are lower
♦ The cow must be suitably restrained—especially the hindquarters so that she cannot move sideways
♦ Sufficient elbow room must be provided for the technician—in particular look at walls which may restrict that elbow room
♦ The pen should be covered—this helps the technician, especially in very bad weather. There should also be sufficient lighting so he can see what he is doing!
♦ There should be easy access to the front of the holding pen—this is very important as it enables ear tag numbers to be properly read
♦ The cow to be inseminated must always be clearly identified—this avoids the wrong cow being served
♦ Sufficient number of people should be available to help the inseminator safely move the cow into the crush

The size and design of facilities will depend on the size of the herd; but good holding facilities are relatively inexpensive and easy to provide and can improve efficiency due to reduction of labour and veterinary costs, decrease in personal injury as well as an improvement in conception rates.

Tombstone Feeders

A member has reported a problem with the tombstone style feeders. The animal became trapped between the tombstones and ultimately had to be put down. The tombstones have now been removed and replaced with widely spaced uprights.

We hope that other members have not experienced such problems, but please do let us know if you have.
!!!!!! WANTED !!!!!!

Who has got fantastic Longhorns grazing at home, the most attractive herd, or even the Longhorn with the best back end?

There are lots of exceptional cattle in our breed, but we don’t have any pictures of them, so we can’t tell other people and the public about them.

We would like to change that!

The Society tries to promote the breed on behalf of its members which in turn means more interest from other breeders and better prices for you.

But to promote the breed we need to show the best of what we have—outside as well as within the show ring

We would like to show all aspects of the breed in our promotional material, for example:

- At home
- Grazing
- In groups
- Feeding
- Being handled
- Being prepared for show or sale
- With calves
- With you!

We would love to see any photos you may have (including ones of historic interest) and can return all photos to you (so long as you tell us who they are from!)

As a small incentive there will be a prizes for:
- The photo of the Longhorn (or Longhorns) with the best rear view,
- The best photo of a Longhorn being prepared for show/sale
- The best photo of Longhorns at home/grazing
- The best “other” photo

Please send photos (by 30th April if you want to be considered for a prize) to the Secretary:

WANTED: DNA SAMPLES

The Longhorn is to be included in a new research project and we need some DNA samples. If you are TB/Brucellosis testing in the next four months, then please let Libby know. She will then work out from their breeding which of your animals will fit into the project.

She will then send blood tubes and instructions for your vet. The blood can be collected at the same time as the test blood. Because we need unrelated animals, it is unlikely that many animals will be selected from any one herd and we need thirty samples in total.

Contact Libby to let her know that you will be testing:
Email: Libby@grassroots.co.uk
